Suffering

I am very satisfied with my health insurance. I use it a lot, both for prescription medicine and for doctor visits. I don't know how I would cope without the coverage I have. However, I know there are many Americans whose health is as bad as mine, and there are many of my fellow citizens whose health is worse than mine who are forced to live without health insurance.

If I felt I didn't want health reform because the excellent care I am receiving might be compromised a bit or I might have to pay a little more for it, that is the same as saying that I don't care if people suffer, just as long as it isn't me.
